Two scientists from Melville-based H2M were both judges at the 10th Annual Long Island Regional Envirothon, an annual environmental competition for Nassau and Suffolk high school students.

H2M was represented by senior geologist Kenneth Wenz from Commack and Caroline Cadalso, a senior project scientist from Huntington, who judge teams from each school as they complete tasks and demonstrate problem-solving and decision making skills.

The Envirothon is a not-for-profit organization coordinated by the Nassau and Suffolk Soil and Water Conservation Districts partnered with the U.S. Department of Agriculture – Natural Resource Conservation Service and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation.

This year’s winners were Chaminade High School in Mineola and Sachem High School North.
